“ I worked with Howard in the Art Department at FMU for the last 10 years. He was a wonderful co-worker and cared so much for his students. His care was demonstrated by all of the wonderful artists he brought in over the years to enlighten the students and also be the numerous trips he took students on. I will miss our talks about cameras and photography. He will be greatly missed. My condolences to the family and my thoughts and prayers are with you as I know you have lost such a dear soul.

“ Howard and I worked with the Art Education Program for over ten years. He loved his students and they more than just loved him. Quick to smile, he drew us all into his world. His world was warm, inquisitive, and hummed with his next project, next grant, next trip. Taking countless students to museums around the U.S. and abroad, he showed them the famous artworks about which they would later teach. Howard's most incredible trait was that he cared. We all benefited. And we all benefited for having him in our lives.

“ Howard was a wonderful person. His positive and friendly demeanor is something the world needs more of. We worked together on Art's Alive for several years and he was always thinking forward to how it could be improved each year. He was a wonderful friend and it was a privilege and pleasure to work with him. Your family is in my prayers.

“ For 19 years Howard was a close and much valued colleague at FMU—this entire fall semester I’ve missed his ebullient persona and his ability to share his love of art, plus a thousand other topics. We talked daily or whenever we would meet in the hallway, and our conversations were frequently quite extended. His premature death leaves a gaping hole in our department, not least because he was always bringing interesting art people to campus to interact with our students thru talks or workshops. All were memorable. Just as important, he also generously took many students on trips to great art centers around the country, and even abroad. So it was a bittersweet privilege that I was able to share my great memories with Howard directly during these last months—he genuinely needed to know what a difference he had made to the lives of so many students and faculty. I hope this brief appreciation of his wonderful legacy as a teacher and as a human being, along with my deepest condolences, will reach his grieving extended family.

“ Howard loved encounters with novel cultures and travel to distant lands. Ever the fearless optimist, he was confident that if he were open and honest with strangers, they would reciprocate in kind. But he also savored his frequent trips home to West Virginia, and was as devoted to his aunt Beulah as he was to his animal friends Pebbles and Okie.

In the 19 years Howard was my colleague at Francis Marion University, he became my mental image of the quintessential absent-minded professor. His mind was always racing, and he enjoyed nothing more than to veer off into a new discipline of study and relish the joy of learning new things about art, about nature, about culture, about music, about the mind, and above all about teaching and learning itself.
